A Surprise For the Thief.

Herr Hager, a rich and influential banker, frequently had watches picked from his pocket. At first he had recourse to all kinds of safety chains, then one morning he took no precaution whatever and quietly allowed himself to be robbed. At night, on returning from his business, he took up the evening paper; he uttered an exclamation of delight. A watch had exploded in a man's hands. The victim's hands were shattered and the left eye destroyed. The crafty banker had filled the watch case with dynamite, which exploded in the operation of winding.—London Telegraph.

FAD OF THE MOMENT.

The Interesting and Absorbing New Fashion of Silhouette Photography. Garrets, old chests and out of the way corners are being ransacked these days for silhouette pictures of ancestors. These relics of other years are being remounted, touched up and re-framed in dull silver or mahogany and given places of honor on the walls of the living room. But the up to date girl goes the old timers one better and has taken up the latest cult, that of silhouette photographs.

The usual method of taking a silhouette photograph is to have your subject sit or stand in profile against the sunlight. The camera is then focused upon the sitter in the usual way and directly in the face of the sun. The operation can usually be carried out very nicely at a window which faces directly toward the sun at some time of the day.

The result is a solid black picture of the subject, which is frequently very striking in its resemblance and life-like character. The great advantage of this method is that an amateur photographer can practice it with great success. If he tries two or three times he is almost certain to obtain a fine silhouette photograph. The framework of the window and some articles of furniture standing near it may be utilized to make an artistic setting for the portrait.

Another very effective method of making a silhouette photograph is to place the subject in front of a strong arc light with a large white sheet behind the light.

This method requires more apparatus, but is absolutely certain to produce a good result. The reason why a silhouette picture gives such an excellent likeness depends upon a few simple truths which are not always borne in mind. The profile of the face shows rigid and unvarying outlines by which we can always recognize a person, whereas the expression of the full face is a very varying and subtle thing which can rarely be caught with absolute fidelity by the camera.

NOVEL TRAINING STUNT.

Baseball Catcher Chases Jack Rabbit to Keep in Condition.

Keeping in condition trying to run a jack rabbit down each day is the new stunt being tried by Catcher George Gibson of the Pittsburg Nationals at his home, near London, Ont. Barney Dreyfuss recently received a letter at Pittsburg from Gibson, which reads in part as follows:

"I had a letter from Chief Wilson the other day. All he writes about is hunting. He says the quails are so thick down where he is that you have to cut a path through them when you go hunting. Nothing like that up here. I have seen a lone jack rabbit this season, and I have been chasing him to keep in condition, but to date I have not captured him. He is the limit for speed. One jump and he lands in the next county. He would make a good trainer. If I can catch him alive I will take him to Hot Springs and let the boys get in condition by chasing him."

The Meanest Man in Town

How Titles Rise.

Titles have their value. "Here, boy!" said the drummer as he handed a dollar bill to the bellboy at the hotel in Atlanta. "Take a dime out of this for bringing up that ice water."

"Yes, cap'n," answered the boy as he saluted.

"And, by the way, boy," continued the drummer, "if you will go down and get me some more letter paper you may keep a quarter out of that dollar."

"Right away, majah, right away!" I'll shuah bring you that ah stashed nery," replied the boy as he bowed low.

"And while I think of it, boy," remarked the knight of the grip, "if you can bring out my trousers and hays them pressed and back here inside of an hour you can keep a half dollar of that dollar."

"Ah suttinly can do dat ah same, colonel—deed Ah kin!" quickly replied the youth as he turned to go toward the door.

"Wait a minute now, boy," Mr. Samples said as he walked over to his trunk, "if you can take out this suit and have it pressed and back here in time for me to go to the Bijou tonight I'll let you keep every cent of that dollar."

"General," said the boy, his eyes bulging out of their sockets, "I'll do dat shuah, general, or give you all that money back." — Philadelphia North American.

THE WORD "WINTER."

Said to Have Originally Indicated Wetness, Not Coldness.

There is a prevailing impression that there is something in the word "winter" that signifies cold, and the season is usually associated with the idea of low temperature, but where the word originated there was little of winter as we understand it, while there was a great deal of moisture at the time the earth was nearest to the sun, so that it is not the temperature but the atmospheric condition that has given us the word.

The word "winter," as we use it, is found with but slight modifications in all the branches of the Aryan languages, for the idea of wetness associated with the season was given to it before the Aryan family was divided.

If we go to the root of the word we find "wad," with the signification of to well, to wash out, to moisten or make wet. Our Aryan ancestors used that root to apply to all conditions of moisture, and many words besides winter have grown out of it, wet and water being among them.

This root "wad" is in the Sanskrit as "udan," water. Anglo-Saxon has "wæter," and in Latin we have "unda," wave, from which we get our "inundate."

Our Danish and Swedish cousins changed the "w" into a "v" and have "vinter." In Icelandic it is "vetir," and the old high German has "win-tar" and it is "winter" in German. These four words are all from the Teutonic base "wata," which means wet. So it has been moisture that has been indicated from the birth of the root on which all of the different words in a dozen languages have grown.—New York Herald.

An Obedient Tiger.

"How entire," remarks the London Globe, "is the confidence of the native East Indian in the government may be gathered from the following anecdote, which comes from Lahore: A tiger had escaped from the zoological gardens, and its keeper, hoping to lure it back, followed it. When all other inducements had failed, he lifted up his voice and solemnly adjured it in the name of the British government, to which it belonged, to come back to its cage. The tiger, it is needless to add, obeyed at once."

THE RIVER NILE.

Ancient Greeks and the Process of Sterilizing Water.

The ancient Greeks already recommended the use of sterilized water. Rufus of Ephesus, in the first century of this era, taught that "all water from rivers and ponds is bad except that from the Nile. Water from rivers which flow through unhealthy soil, stagnant water and that which flows near public bathing places is harmful. The best water is that which has been boiled in baked earthenware vessels, cooled and then heated a second time before drinking."

This hygienic prescription was intended both for healthy and sick people, since it was applied to the armies.

"During marches and in camps pits must be dug successively from the highest point to the lowest level of the place. These holes should be lined with clay such as is used for making pottery and the water should be made to percolate through it. The water will leave all its impurities in these pits."

It may be inquired how the ancient Greeks, knowing the processes of sterilization and filtration of water which they applied to that of the most limpid rivers, should have drunk without precautions the water of the Nile, which our microscopes allow us to declare "sound," but which is in appearance the most worthy of suspicion of all and is so muddy, so yellow, that it resembles wine.—Gazette des Eaux.
